Report of Superintendent of Schools.

To conform to the law and time-honored custom it becomes my duty to submit to the people of the town a report of the manner in which business has been conducted appertaining to schools the past year.

Necessarily these reports from year to year differ but little one from the other. It is now generally conceded by all intelligent people that the public school system is one of the most important subjects considered in state legislatures and in congress.

During the school year conditions generally have been favorable for a regular attendance, and we are able to report a very good average attendance, largest average in any school, 29 ; smallest, 8, see table. Fifteen terms of school have been taught with a school year of 147 weeks, average length of terms 9 12-15 weeks.

As it has been a practice not to particularize on the merits or demerits of any particular teacher or teachers in former reports, I will simply say the schools have been fortunate in the corps of teachers selected to preside over their sessions, the names of most of them being familiar to you from old acquaintance. These teachers have labored faithfully and in the main successfully, heartily seconding the efforts of the board looking toward an increase in the efficiency of the schools, and a larger measure of success for their own efforts.

Much effort was put forth by the teachers to engage their pupils in the lessons before them and to give them those habits of order, attention and thoroughness which are necessary to good progress, and this effort was crowned with an amount of success which could reasonably be expected. The labor of a teacher who is interested in her school and consequently for the advancement of her scholars is undoubtedly followed with marked and gratifying results.

Now it is very often the case that the parent turns the child over to the care of the teacher and seems to think that the care at home can be relaxed because the child is in school. The teachers as a rule will be glad to look after the mental and moral training of their scholars, but while they are careful and diligent in looking after the welfare of their pupils, we shall find outside of the school room many things will be said by the children, many lessons taught that should be corrected at home.

Owing to the fact that our reading books were in such a dilapidated condition, many copies being unfit for use, and that a large number must be procured of the old series to equip the different schools, it was deemed advisable by the School Board to make a change; so looking to this end different readers were ordered as samples, and among others "Heath's Readers." While the different books examined were good, this series of readers was thought to be the best; the stories included have the merit of novelty as well as fascination, many of the selections never having appeared in a reading book. All material has been graded with unusual care to avoid sudden and extreme leaps from that which is easy to that which is difficult.

Milne's arithmetics have been in use in our schools for several years in a two book series; to meet the varying needs of teachers and pupils it was thought best to introduce the third series or small book, a simpler book for beginners. They meet the requirements of schools in a natural and logical manner and develop each subject by easy and interesting steps.

Morton's Geographies have been placed in all the schools, taking the place of the old book so long used. This book gives a clear, simple statement of the great known facts of the world.

We shall find that close application and careful work will bring its reward. It is said that the ordinary German boy of fourteen or fifteen has accomplished a great deal more intellectual work than the American boy. In general attainments and mental culture it is claimed the German boys are some two years ahead of our boys, but the truth is, that the American boy is not willing to work as hard as they, at least over his books. A professor of Bowdoin College said "It is this willingness to be trained in school, and use of the best methods, that makes out of the German boys the greatest scholars the world has ever known, and the most successful traders of the commercial world."

Many parents appreciate the necessity of their children being present every day in order to realize the full benefit of the school. There are still too many who do not appreciate the value of regular attendance. Parents should carefully consider the matter. Do not let the child's inclination determine the matter, but let it be a fixed rule that the child is to attend school every day unless sickness or some other unavoidable cause renders it impossible. Let all the people work together for the improvement of the schools, for they lie deeper than politics, and are more potential than money. Our material and social prosperity, and our moral character as a people, must advance or decline with the schools, and we can not afford to let them alone.

Respectfully submitted,

JAMES B. MARTIN.
